LEARNING, TEACHING AND ASSESSMENT INFORMATION

6a. Module Description

This module introduces students to a range of social psychological approaches to the study of inter-group conflict, hatred and oppression. It covers both individual and social factors which promote and sustain hostile relations, negative attitudes, and/or violence between ethnic, national, religious or cultural groups. The module draws on research using a range of methods, including experimental work, case studies, and discourse analysis. Topics covered include stereotypes, racism, intractable violent conflict (e.g. the Middle East conflict), terrorism, propaganda and genocide. Particular attention is paid to the Holocaust. Students will learn practical transferable skills such as how to manage information, communicate effectively in written format, and apply social psychological ideas to political situations.

6b. Outline Content

- Negative stereotypes - New and old racism - Cultural adaptations to violent conflict - Racist discourse - Loyalty and threat - Violence and terrorism - Holocaust

6c. Key Texts/Literature

The reading list to support this module is available at: <https://readinglists.aru.ac.uk/>

6d. Specialist Learning Resources

Students should make use of the university's specialist library resources (e.g., journal articles) in order to expand their knowledge and understanding of the subject area. This also introduces students to the nature of independent learning. A number of documentaries available on BoB and other documents will be recommended during the module.
