LEARNING, TEACHING AND ASSESSMENT INFORMATION

6a. Module Description

We'll equip you with essential tools to navigate qualitative, quantitative, or mixed methods of inquiry to help you develop a research proposal, laying the groundwork for an impactful project, in preparation for the research project in your final year whilst developing your critical analysis of published research.

Building on the transferrable skills introduced earlier in the course, we'll look at the development of a research project from conception to completion, concentrating on the forming and shaping of a study using a variety of approaches. You'll develop an understanding of the use of statistics in research whilst we introduce you to some of the statistical data analysis techniques used in the medical and scientific literature. You'll gain an appreciation for the rationale involved in making the correct choices when undertaking research and evaluating the relative 'strength' of evidence-based practice in healthcare.

This module is exempt from the full ethical approval process in accordance with section 6 of the Academic Regulations (www.anglia.ac.uk/academicregs). Expires Jan 2030
