LEARNING, TEACHING AND ASSESSMENT INFORMATION

6a. Module Description

This module provides an introduction to the study of Philosophy at degree level, and encourages you to explore some of the 'big' questions: the existence of God; the nature of Knowledge; the nature of Time; the nature of the Self; Free Will; the Mind, and the nature of ethical deliberation. You be actively involved in discussing and debating some of the key arguments about these questions through the study of contemporary philosophical work in this area. You will also develop some key degree-level skills. These skills include: a) Learning about the structure and 'logic' of argumentation (Critical Thinking); b) Learning about how to engage in independent and reliable research (Working in the Knowledge Economy) and c) Learning how to structure and prepare essays and assignments (Content Curation).

There will be corresponding interactive workshops to help structure and develop your skills in these areas. You will get the opportunity to develop your writing and presentational skills, as well as gaining knowledge and understanding of the foundational issues in contemporary philosophy. This module will help you to become adaptable, flexible and analytical in your thinking, and to strengthen skills in developing creative approaches to problems.

6b. Outline Content

- Logic and Critical Thinking
- Epistemology
- Metaphysics
- Value Theory

9. Assessment for the above Module Occurrence

The assessment for some modules includes a presentation (see below for details on how this particular module is assessed). We recognise that presenting, especially to a large group, can cause significant anxiety or distress for some students. If this may affect you, please contact your Module Leader or the Disability and Neurodiversity Service as early as possible. We will work with you to consider appropriate reasonable adjustments. Depending on your individual needs, these might include, for example, presenting to a smaller group or presenting only to a member of academic staff.
